2021 Global Health Horizons Honors Thesis Program

As a previous requirement for all Global Health BA students, we have transitioned the two-quarter cohort to an optional honors program for dedicated Global Health seniors.

During Spring quarter of a student's junior year, Global Health majors may apply to be a part of the two-quarter Honors Thesis Seminar, open only to Global Health majors in the BA and BS. This seminar will provide an opportunity to expand, deepen, and share the insights of your Global Health Field Experience or a topic of interest in the field of global health, with members of your cohort.

- Winter Quarter 2021: GLBH 150A. Global Health Horizons Honors Thesis Seminar I will consist of intensive reading and discussion in fields related to each student's primary interest and building on your field experience. This course will satisfy a Medical Social Science Elective.
- Spring Quarter 2021: GLBH 150B. Global Health Horizons Honors Thesis Seminar II will be a workshop with critical input from all participants focused on preparing a senior thesis that will provide an important credential for students in the next stage of their careers and as they prepare applications for graduate academic or professional training. This course will satisfy the Upper Division Significant Writing Course (B.A. only) OR Medical Humanities Elective.

For eligibility requirements, please take a look at our checklist on the Global Health major requirements website.

*We still encourage all interested students to apply to the program, even if you have not met each of the eligibility requirements, as we are using these requirements to guide our selection process.
